

NOTES ON THE CONTRIBUTORS

Judith Calvert graduated in history from Oxford in 1983. She took her M.A. in Archive Administration at Liverpool in 1984 and is currently Records and Archives Services Manager at B.P. Oil Ltd.

Dr. Basil Cottle was a cryptanalyst with the Enigma team and has lectured in mediaeval English and Archaeology at Bristol University for 42 years. Author of the Penguin Dictionary of Surnames and other books, he is an F.S.A. and was President of the Bristol and Gloucestershire Archaeological Society 1987-8.

Martin Crossley Evans was educated at Wellington School, Bebington, graduated at Bristol and Keele, taught at Gresham's School, Holt, and is Warden of a Bristol University hall of residence and a member of the Council of the Bristol and Gloucestershire Archaeological Society. His chief study is in the 17th-century Church.

Emmiline Garnett is a retired teacher with no formal historical training. She has been researching all the dated buildings in South Lonsdale since 1981 and wrote this paper originally as her dissertation for the Diploma in Local History at Lancaster and Liverpool Universities.

Malcolm Gratton is Head of History at Calderstones Comprehensive School, Liverpool. He has written several articles on the Civil Wars and is currently examining popular allegiance in Lancashire from 1642 to 1651.

Philip Higson lectures in History at Chester College of Higher Education and took his degree at Liverpool University. His research interests include the Renaissance, Lancashire Nonconformity, and fin-de-siècle poetry.

David Mills holds a Personal Chair in English Language and Literature at the University of Liverpool. He has published extensively on early English drama, focusing particularly upon Chester's mystery cycle and its background. He is co-editor of the standard scholarly edition of the cycle.

