

NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Dr Geoff Baker is Academic Advisor at the Centre for Integrative Learning, University of Nottingham. He has held fellowships at the Huntington Library, California, and the Folger Shakespeare Library, Washington D.C. He has published a number of articles on early modern English Catholicism and his monograph on the political and cultural worlds of William Blundell is due to be published by Manchester University Press in 2009.

John Beckett is Professor of English Regional History in the University of Nottingham and is currently on secondment to the University of London as Director of the Victoria County History. He is a graduate of Lancaster University.

Dr Peter Cotgreave was a lecturer in the Zoology Department at the University of Oxford before moving into scientific administration and communication. He is currently Director of Public Affairs at the Royal Society. He has been fascinated by the history of Cheshire since childhood and is a member of the Council of the Record Society of Lancashire and Cheshire.

John Davies taught until his retirement at Liverpool Hope University (College), where he was a principal lecturer in History. He is assistant editor of North West Catholic History.

Dr Sarah Griffiths completed her PhD on 'The charitable work of the Macclesfield silk manufacturers, 1750-1900' in 2006 with the University of Chester. This followed on from an MA in 'Landscape, Heritage and Society' at the same institution. She currently works for Chronicle Newspapers in Chester.

Stephen Matthews, BA, FRHistS, is a retired civil servant who has made a study of nineteenth-century Cheshire estates and antiquarian history.

Dr Graeme J. Milne is Research Editor, AHRC Liverpool in Print Project, School of History, University of Liverpool. His current work can be found on the Liverpool in Print website at www.liverpool.gov.uk/archives. Recent publications include 'Maritime Liverpool' in John Belchem, ed., Liverpool 800: Culture, character, history (Liverpool, 2006) and North east England, 1860-1914: The dynamics of a maritime-industrial region (Woodbridge, 2006).

Mr John S. Moore, BA, FSA, FRHistS, is now Senior Research Fellow, Department of Historical Studies, University of Bristol, where he was previously lecturer in Economic History. His books include The goods and chattels of our forefathers (1975); Avon local history handbook (1979); and Domesday Book: Gloucestershire (1982). He co-edited The House of Lords: the nobility in Britain, 1042-1992 (1994); The House of Commons, past and present (1996); and The monarchy: 1500 years of British tradition (1998). He has contributed numerous articles to the English historical review, Transactions of the royal historical society, Economic history review, Anglo-Norman studies, Nomina and Southern history.